

STUART JOHNSON, DESERET NEWS

Bob Clarke shows how he carves a fish. His and others' carvings will be on display this month.

Artisans hope to carve out a

OREM — Woodcarvers will be front and center in the exhibit area of the SCERA Art Center as two exhibits open in December.

Fifty members are expected to participate in the second annual showing from the Utah Valley Woodcarvers this week, from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday from noon to 9 p.m.

Admission is free. The "Artistry in Wood" exhibit is in Room 101.

Carvers will demonstrate how they create their masterpieces and sell some of their handiwork.

"There will be all types of carving, from relief, chip wildlife. It is re said Marlene Ri the association Tuesday of each nior Friendship

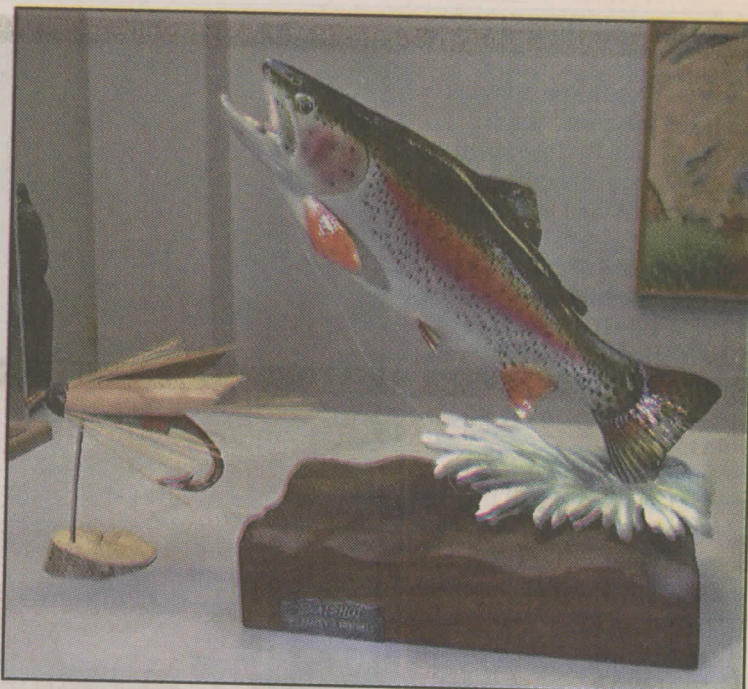

The second e

... which is scheduled to last

STUART JOHNSON, DESERET NEWS

Marlene Richardson, a woodcarver, calls this wooden work of art "Come Set a Spell." It is done in drop relief style.

STUART JOHNSON, DESERET NEWS

A finished trout carving by Stacey J. Mitchell, titled "Snapshot," is among the pieces to be displayed at the SCERA Arts Center.

out a niche at exhibits from relief, chip carvers, caricature and wildlife. It is really a beautiful at form," said Marlene Richardson, a member of the association which meets the second Tuesday of each month in the Orem Senior Friendship Center.

The second exhibit features the paintings of Max Weaver, along with the work of local artists Ernel Anderson, Fay Woolston, Gene Riggs, Sharon Cannon and Barbra Wardle.

The SCERA Art Gallery is located inside the SCERA Center at 745 S. State Street, Orem. For more information, call 225-2569.